

AWAS delivers Boeing 737-300 to Boliviana de Aviación

Dublin, 19 February 2009

Dublin based lessor, AWAS, has delivered a Boeing 737-300 to Boliviana de Aviación in Bolivia. Boliviana is a newly established, government-owned, airline that will initially operate domestic routes throughout Bolivia before ultimately expanding its operations to include international routes across Latin America. This is the second 737-300 the airline has taken delivery of this year.

This new partnership reflects AWAS' commitment to diversifying its portfolio worldwide. Boliviana is the third new airline customer to which AWAS has delivered aircraft this year, following the delivery of the first of six A330-300s to Singapore Airlines in January and a Boeing 737-300 to Canjet in February.

According to Mr. Ronald Casso, General Manager of the airline: "Boliviana de Aviación is a state enterprise created to provide a high quality service to passengers. This AWAS Boeing 737-300 aircraft has been subject to all the necessary technical maintenance to ensure its safety on the routes that will be covered by our strategic national enterprise. The Boeing 737-300 has the best features to operate in Bolivia, given the weather conditions and airport infrastructure in the country, providing greater flight security thanks to its modern technology".
