AWAS delivers 737-300 to Small Planet Airlines

Dublin, 30 July 2010

Dublin based lessor, AWAS, has delivered a Boeing 737-300 to Small Planet Airlines (formerly known as flyLAL charters), headquartered in Vilnius, Lithuania.

The aircraft will be based in Milan, Italy and will operate to destinations across Europe.

Vytautas Kaikaris, CEO of Small Planet Airlines noted “despite the economic downturn, 2009 proved a very successful year for our company and we became the largest charter carrier in the Baltic region with future plans to grow in other EU markets, namely Poland, Italy and UK. By 2012 Small Planet Airlines plans to operate twelve aircraft and become one of Europe’s ten largest independent charter carriers. We are delighted to take delivery of this AWAS 737-300 which joins our growing fleet.”

“It is with great pleasure that we welcome Small Planet Airlines to our European customer base. Their success over the past eighteen months has been impressive and we will continue to seek opportunities to support Boeing operators in the region.” stated Jennifer Moulton, Senior Vice President Sales, AWAS.
